

|reception + public areas

A property consists of much more than rooms. One very important aspect is the Public Areas, especially because this is often what your guests first see.

Experience is essential in the design of these areas. This is why we don't only make sure your property complies with Building Codes such as Fire Retardancy and slip ratings, we also work closely with your staff to design an area that works for them.

The Reception area must be designed to work efficiently in busy times as well as have specialised areas for guests files, keys and computers. It must also introduce your guest to the property in a warm, inviting way and be reflective of the remainder of the property. All of these making it imperative to have the design right.

Public Areas we specialise in include, receptions, hallways, restaurants, bars, conference facilities, facades, entry foyers, public amenities, business centres and the guest lounge.
